Americold's Commitment to Ensuring Supply Chain Security

To all Americold associates, vendors, and customers:

The most important resource at Americold is our people. We have security programs in place to protect every person who works in our facilities, and we take all measures possible to protect the assets that are critical to our success including our facilities, systems, information, and customers' products.

We know and recognize that security threats are real and that we must do our part to ensure those who want to harm us or others do not use the global supply chain to do so. To that end, Americold has partnered with U.S. Customs and Border Protection's (CBP) Trade Partnership against Terrorism (C-TPAT) Program as a potential certified member in defense of supply chain terrorism. C-TPAT is a voluntary government initiative that strengthens the international supply chain by leveraging its global partners in border security. Americold is proud to join other Third-Party Logistics Providers within this program and is honored to be considered a part of their new Congressional pilot program.

Each of our local operating warehouses are expected to implement security procedures and provide ongoing security awareness training to our associates. This supports our overall commitment to ensure the security of our people and our customers' cargo in the supply chain. Our success is dependent on full participation from our associates and vendors. I ask that each of you commit to ensuring a secure environment by following training directives and site instructions so we may maintain our reputation within the industry and continue to deliver world class service.

Best regards,

George Chappelle
Chief Executive Officer
